The grief in bereaved families for those who fell in battle is slight compared with that which is felt by mothers who know that their sons perlaned slowly and miserably of hunger and disease. "It is very easy for you Englishmen to talk about mercy and forgiveness," said a lady, talking of this subject, "but how would you have felt toward the Russians if they had starved and murdered fifteen thousand of your soldiers in one prison?" It is this feeling which extends through every class of society in the North. To condemn it without weighing the circumstances which preduced it is to do less than justice to a people who are ready to shake hands with every Southern man, and to help him with money

Particulars such as these seem to be received with ap-probation by the public, for as the time of Mr. Davis' trial draws nearer the interest which is felt in its result increases. It was thought that by postponing the event pub-lic opinion in the North would soften to-wards Davis; but there is no indication of such a change. On the contrary, circum-

As a body, the Northern people are im-patient to be friends with the South. It is only against the leaders that they bear an-imosity, and it is chiefly concentrated upon the head of Davis; fer he lived within a atone's throw of Labby Prison, whence the corpaes of starved men were daily carried out in large numbers. It may be asked did Davis or tien. Lee know of the manner in which couthern prisoners were treated? The North believe they did, and therefore, as I have said, the cry for their lives, however repulsive it may sound, is not a cry raised without provocation. It is not the wild clamor of a mob; and it is so far deep and general that I believe the government
